Ruvan Wijesooriya is a photographer based in NYC. His unique vision blurs the lines between life, art and commerce in subject areas ranging from landscapes to fashion, music to flowers. His photographs record his interests, passions and inspirations, his approach always fun, genuine and curious. Ruvan exhibited in Stockholm last week; he shows in Copenhagen and London this May. His work decorates the set of the TV show Gossip Girl, where a character was based on him; his pictures are featured in the music documentary, “Shut Up and Play The Hits.” His work is collected by artists such as Ed Ruscha and Doug Aitken.

For his Window Box debut the main photograph on display will be revealed once the audience has peeled off dozens of other, smaller photographs covering the main piece. These smaller works serve as keepsakes from attending the opening as well as insight into the range of his work while making a point about the selected single image – as if it took all the other images to create the one main image and vice versa. Ruvan’s exhibitons are generally less about the photographs themselves, and more about how people interact with the pictures, how the audience reuses them and how they are collected as objects. In this gesture, Ruvan’s artwork is made for him to share with others.

Opening hours: April 27 – May 22 (day and night)
